Leap Year.

Inasmuch as this is the last leap year, until 1904, we think it proper to furnish the young ladies a list of eligible young men from whom they may choose husbands.

But Burgher is the most precious in the list. He is fat and may be forty for all we know, he has saved many girls from watery graves, and others from the peril of runaway horses. He has a tooth for a good thing. He may blush when the question is "popped" but like Barkis, is willing.

Lloyd Todd sings like a canary; he is so afraid he will be approached upon the subject of matrimony, that he avoids the young ladies company, as much as possible; can always be found at home Saturday nights. The young lady who wins his heart must be well versed in card playing.

Willmott McKinney hails the new year with great delight, he has seen so many leap years come and go, that he looks on a gap of eight years with horror. He had the question "popped" to him one leap year, but jumped at the chance so eagerly that the young lady became so frightened as to back out. He says he'll not make the same mistake again.

Asa Barnett dislikes the mention of leap year because he knows there are so many girls waiting for a chance at him, that he is afraid he will have to "except" one so as to defend himself against the rest. It is said that he takes his meals at the attic and wears a veil to his work, but yet he will have to surrender.

Asa Todd is very bashful, but makes up for it in goodness. His laugh is like the ripple of soda water on the fourth of July, delicious and refreshing. The young lady who is fortunate enough to get him must be able to cook Cod fish and pumpkin pie.

LOCALS.

Business is brisk.

The egg trade is good at this market.

Good green coffee 20c a pound at Burgher's.

How does this issue of The Times suit you.

Reubin Tipton and L. B. Burgher are hustling these days.

Go to W. R. Cassidy's, Clay City, Ky., for clothing.

W. E. Heflin is erecting a tenement house on his farm about 1 mile east of town, in Powell county.

Go to W. R. Cassidy's, Clay City, for stoves, hardware and tinware.

Spout Spring needs a daily mail. Other towns of less business than ours has daily mail; Why not Spout Spring

Thos. McKinney is building a shop, and expects to be ready to do all kinds of blacksmithing by next Wednesday.

For bargains, go to J. E. Burgher, Jr.

Circuit Court convened at Irvine Monday, Judge D. B. Redwin, presiding.

A new stock of clothing just received at W. R. Cassidy's.

B.S. Burgher has bought a lot on Main street, and will build a residence thereupon in a short length of time.

Notwithstanding the present low price of corn in this community, the farmers are making preparations to cultivate as much corn as usual.

Spout Spring rivals Winchester and Mt. Sterling for horse swapping. Almost every Saturday there are a can be found a number of horses on the streets for trade.

Wholesale brogan shoes at Burgher's for $1.00

Judge W. M. Beckner, of Winchester, and candidate for congress, addressed the people of Irvine Monday. He quite a fluent speaker, and his superior as congressman, doubtless, cannot be found.

The recent tide in Red, and Kentucky rivers has afforded transfer for many logs to market, from the upper country.

Tobacco will be more extensively grown in this section of the country than ever before within our knowledge. The effect of which will doubtless be more money in the community. If all our farmers would put in a small crop of even one or two acres, it would add considerably to their income.
